Ask freeze church funds

Members of Corinth Church went to court last week seeking to restrain illegal incorporators from spending any of the $47,500 received from a bank for a perpetual easement on its property in the MTO area.

Specifically, Charles Thigpen, chairman of the board of directors, and the others have asked the Chancery Court for a writ of sequestration to in effect freeze the money deposited in the Bank so they can be turned over only by court order on satisfactory evidence.

Industry prospects seen good

Preliminary findings in the industrial survey being undertaken by Michael Baker Co. for the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission are encouraging, members of the commission and board of supervisors were told Monday night by representatives of the engineering firm.

Winona man named OYF

William Crenshaw of Winona was named outstanding young farmer of the state by the Mississippi Jaycees Saturday night at a banquet in Bay-Waveland Yacht Club. Second was Dock B. Slaton of Magnolia and third Victor L. Ellison of Amory.

Judges were George R. Queen, manager of the agriculture department of Chamber of Commerce of New Orleans Area and County Agent, Orleans Parish, Victor Murray, County Agriculture Agent, Washington Parish, La., and Grafton W. Cooper, Associate County Agriculture Agent, also of Washington Parish.

Aubin G. Harris of Holly Bluff Farms was Hancock County's candidate. Judging was based on contributions to agriculture, conservation abilities and interests in community well-being.

Guest speaker at the meeting, sponsored by the local Jaycees and Coast Electric Power Assn., was St. Corley, state commissioner of agriculture, who noted that farmers today are getting less money for their produce but that their farms were getting larger.

"There are fewer and fewer farmers every year," he said, "and we are 100 per cent behind this Jaycee program and anything else that might encourage young men to go into farming."

"The farmer is no longer a country hick," he added, "but an intelligent individual usually having a couple of years college training."

Welcoming address was made by Andre Arceneaux and Charles E. Carter, Jr., served as master of ceremonies. Presentation of awards was by Howard Langitt of the Mississippi Power Co. O. O. Swords, county agent, introduced the speaker. The banquet was attended by more than 150 persons from every part of the state. A dance at the Jaycee home followed the banquet.

Hancock shocked by JFK's murder

A stunned Hancock County slowly endeavored this week to move back to normalcy after the death early last Friday afternoon of President John F. Kennedy from an assassin's wounds.

First word of the tragedy reached most local homes at the lunch hour and spread rapidly as citizens glued their attention to radio and television. Business activity ground to a standstill, where it remained for days, as news came that the President had died and except for the most vital services. Bay-Waveland merchants closed their doors in the early afternoon Monday during the funeral.

Telephones at the Echo offices started ringing as soon as the first news flash of the shooting went out over the air, each caller voicing disbelief that such could have transpired and fear that Mr. Kennedy would die. A few businessmen stopped by to inquire if the bulletin was accurate and joined the staff in listening to a radio over which word quickly came of the death of the President. In a daze they turned and left.

American flags were lowered to half mast at all public buildings in the area and will remain there for the next 30 days, prescribed formal period of mourning for a chief executive.

By their faces and their conversations the citizens of Hancock County conveyed the impact upon them of the incredulous news from Dallas. There was outspoken fear that the assassin was an arch segregationist. "Thank God it didn't happen in Mississippi," said many. There was almost disbelief it could be a Communist-inspired conspiracy. Many Orleanians, here for the weekend, recalled the visit of Lee Harvey Oswald there only a few months ago.

Clergymen spoke of the tragedy from their pulpits and in their prayers at Sunday services and most churches opened their doors for meditation Monday. A special mass was said Monday morning at Our Lady of the Gulf Catholic Church. First Baptist Church had a noon service as did First Baptist in Pearlman County and parochial schools were closed Monday while public offices and many businesses were shut during the hours of the funeral.

The assassination

An editorial

The death last Friday of President John Kennedy perceptibly shocked almost all citizens of the United States of America. It showed up not merely in the public expressions by them, it was apparent in many of their activities and in the one athletic contest we paid attention to, the ninth invitational tournament at Pass Christian Isles Golf Club, it seemed to affect the scores of the participants.

This is as it should be. Whether or not an individual concurred with President Kennedy's governmental policies is beside the point; President Kennedy represented the United States. His assassination was not merely the murder of an able, big and prominent man. To citizens of this country it was the murder of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. All of us should have mourned.

See $1 million assessment loss

NASA's Mississippi Test Operations is going to mean a loss of $1,110,473 to Hancock County's assessment roles but chances are bright that resulting real estate development will offset the effect.

That's the view of county Tax Assessor George Heitzmann and it provided the topic for a talk he made before the state assessors' convention in Jackson earlier this month.

In four sub-divisions in the so-called outside area of the Bay St. Louis Separate Municipal School District there are 107 new homes which have been completed and which will go on the tax rolls for the first time Jan. 1, Heitzmann reports. For example last week Belle Isles sub-division had six new homes and three or four under construction.

There's a small rectangular portion of Springwood Park outside the MTO buffer zone and that has 19 new homes this year. East Ansley sub-division has added five new homes. In the huge Herron Bay Estates the first dwelling was completed last week and the developer tells Heitzmann he has already sold over 200 building sites in the first section and has nearly 2,000 lots in all.

The assessor cites the 400 acres being developed as Herron Bay Estates has a good example of that sub-division growth means on the tax rolls. On the $8 per acre assessment for undeveloped land it was listed for a $3,200 assessment. But it's been subdivided into 1,076 lots of which 800 are on the waterfront and therefore will carry a minimum assessment of $100. That means, Heitzmann explains, that the proerty will be assessed for $93,000 on the land alone and as homes are built the figure will keep on going up.

Property within the 13,500-acre fee area of MTO is off the tax rolls as of Jan. 1, 1964, since all of that is now owned by the federal government. It amounts

Thanksgiving

Aboard their small sailing vessel anchored off the New England Coast November 11, 1620, forty-one heroic Englishmen signed the Mayflower Compact which, according to William Bradford, was to hold in check the restless individuals on board, who had threatened to strike out on their own when they landed. This became America's first venture in self government.

In establishing the Plymouth Colony, these Pilgrim Fathers suffered the hardships of a bitter winter. With food scarce and disease prevalent, nearly half their number died. They soon discovered that their original compact for the common ownership of property and crops was not workable. Several were lazy and seditious and refused to assume their responsibilities, expecting favored treatment, but their returns. So America's first experiment in socialism failed and was abandoned.

These pioneering Pilgrims then turned to the principles of private ownership and individual effort, as the only hope of immediate survival and ultimate success, to sow the seed of capitalism in the New World.

With a successful corn crop in 1621, Governor Bradford decreed that a day be set aside to express thanks to God for an abundant harvest and His guidance and protection.

As we observe the anniversary of that first Thanksgiving Day, it is well that we do so reverently, and that we rededicate ourselves to the preservation of the American concepts of individual responsibility, character, thrift and self government first established and commemorated at Plymouth by our Pilgrim Fathers.

Teen Times

With six weeks less behind, Bay High students, and most college students having completed first semester exams, just about everybody is prepared to enjoy a few days vacation and their Thanksgiving turkeys. Those attending U.S.M. began arriving home as early as Friday, although some remained in Hattiesburg to attend the Citadel game. They'll have a whole week in which to relax. P.R.C. students left for home at noon Wednesday and return to classes Monday, Dec. 2. Local high schools (and elementary) will be closed both Thursday and Friday. SJA and Scouting pupils will have a few more hours of grace as they let out at noon Wednesday to allow boarders time to return to their homes.

Although many events were cancelled due to the assassination of President Kennedy, Bay High met Harrison Central in their scheduled basketball game here Friday night. The Tigers won their game by a scant point, 52-51, the Tigerettes were not so fortunate, losing by 17 points.

The Aluminum Bowl game was also played in Chalmette, La., under skies which varied between drizzling and pouring rain. Despite completion of a beautiful 70 yard pass by Curtis Mathews, the Eagles of St. Bernard High defeated Stanislaus 34-7. The local boys managed to keep the opposition scoreless in the first quarter but not only were handicapped by the weather but also by their lack of reserves.

Catholic Youth Organization of St. Clare's meets each Monday at 7:30 p.m. All high school students in the parish are invited to attend.

Mary Gottschalk spent Friday night with Christine Sauer after the girls returned from the Aluminum Bowl game.

Those returning home for the holidays not mentioned in last week's column include Carol Western, Jerry Seuzeneu and Jim Johnston from Southern, Gail Savary and Tunnel Backlund from Ole Miss, Sue Porter from All Saints in Natchez, Wynn Heath, Tommy Sammers and Teddo Thomas from L.S.U., Delta Jacob from Loyola and Billy Kidd from Perkinson.

Perfect football weather contributed greatly to the success of the 47th annual Fleo-Fly classic. Debbie Peelson and Ritchey Gentry reigned as queen and king of the affair. Maid of honor, Lauren Turcotte was escorted by Duke Jody Bevenmull.

Jo Ann McCullouch who is on the P.R.C. cheering squad spent the weekend at home. Janice Bourne and Bill Jennings, both Bay High grads are also members of this cheerleading group.

Happy birthday wishes go to Janet Trapani who celebrated her birthday Wednesday Dec. 4.

In career lectures

'Don't' is taboo, HNC pupils told

"Can't should be in a teenager's vocabulary," S. Grady Thigpen, Jr., told students of Hancock North Central school in the career lecture series last week. "A little effort applied in the right direction makes most things possible and brings about a certain pride and accomplishment in the success obtained."

Thigpen, speaking on careers in retailing, recounted the story of his father in establishing one of the largest retail hardware, furnishings, and building materials stores in south Mississippi. His father worked his way through Mississippi State, taught for six years in Poplarville, and then, in 1918, opened his store where he sold wagons and wood stoves. Six years later he started publishing his store's news, primarily to advertise his own merchandise. Later, he included the ads of other members of the community at no charge to them. The news gained in popularity and circulation. A copy came to the attention of George Matthew Adams, who used it as the subject of one of his columns, commenting: "If someone tries to help another, he so helps himself."

Basic points for the businessman to remember are you must service what you sell; you must advise; you must stay up; you must assume community responsibilities by working with and for the schools; churches, politics, and progress; you must take care of your health; and don't complain.

Thigpen was graduated from the School of Business Administration of Tulane University in 1947 and from Picayune Memorial High School.

Finishes basic

Frederick S. Gottschalk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Gottschalk of 333 de Montaudin, completed basic training Nov. 1, at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill. The nine-week training includes naval orientation, history and organization, seamanship, ordnance and gunnery, military drill, physical fitness, first aid and survival.

Where Your Ship Comes In

Some years ago a statewide contest was conducted by the Gulfport Chamber of Commerce to select a slogan for the city. Mrs. George C. Poole of Gulfport won first prize, "Gulfport Where Your Ship Comes In."

This was not just another poetic phrase of fancy that had to do with the fulfillment of someone's pipe-dream.

Recent figures compiled and made public by Edwin A. Stebbins, Port Director of the Gulfport State Port Authority, show that each ship loading or unloading 10,100 net tons of cargo at the state-owned port of Gulfport brings in an average of $94,308.89 to contribute to the city's economy. And a number of the 182 ships that called at the port to discharge or pick up cargo during 1962 were ten-thousand-ton ships.

A major portion of this $94,000 added revenue goes directly into payroll, approximately $42,000 in stevedoring charges for unloading and loading.

The first to feel the financial impact of each ship that comes in are the city's merchants and service businesses, as the ships take on supplies—fresh water, food and fuel. Every bunch of bananas and every sack of Chilean nitrate that comes in, and every shipment of lumber, corn meal, flour or urea that goes out fills pay envelopes and rings cash registers.

And it does much more than that, for the port has a stimulating effect upon the economy of the whole state. As industries multiply the port becomes the single most strategic factor in the industrial development of Mississippi. The increasing number of ships calling at Gulfport under the State Port Authority is gratifying. During the months of July, August and September in 1963, there were 60 sailings.

Every ship that calls is laden with treasure. Let's import and export through Gulfport, "Where Your Ship Comes In," and build Mississippi.

Not too early

It is too soon for us to make any firm evaluation of the harm to our country and the world the assassination of our President has and will cause. Circumstances of the last week have moved too fast and the situation is too complicated and confused for anyone to make a calm appraisal. Only one thing seems certain to us, the assassination of President John Kennedy and the subsequent murder of his suspected slayer, Lee Oswald, constitute a major black spot on this country's history.

Nevertheless, some comments about the many ramifications of President Kennedy's death even now seem in order.

Our television and radio communication media, we think, did a service to our country in cancelling all entertainment during the period of formal mourning. Dramatically that should have brought home to us the tragic seriousness of the fact.

The murder of the President's accused assassin leaves the inevitable question in our minds—what was Oswald's motive?

Even before the President's body was cold some tried to use his death for personal and political motives. Perhaps, outstanding in this misuse of the tragedy was the congressman from next door, Rep. Hale Boggs, La. Apparently thinking the assassination was tied in with the integration-segregation question on Friday Boggs said "This fall I went to New Orleans, my home district, and I made a speech. I tried to calm the drums of blind hatred against the President of the United States. I warned we were on a collision course, but the drums beat louder there and in other places."

Still later the head of Mississippi's Young Democrats resigned because of the views of Mississippi officialdom and Mississippi Democrats about President Kennedy, views relating to his political policies.

These statements and other less local more than indicate the prospect that the President's murder, apparently by a left-winger, will be used by those concurring with the controversial programs of his administration. In that use they have the same merit as does that of the Louisiana politico's remark that the crime was the will of God because of President Kennedy's views of integration. Neither has merit.

A reminder

While we speak only from our own experience, judging from the madly rushing people we've seen shopping Christmas Eve day and evening we are not alone in sometimes putting off till tomorrow what should have been done yesterday.

At this time of year the Bay-Waveland merchants have their full line of regular merchandise plus a whole lot more. Today the buyer has a wide choice in what to give Aunt Minnie. The day before Christmas even a tree is hard to find except in the woods.

A word to the wise is sufficient. Hope we'll remember that.

President Johnson

John F. Kennedy is dead. The country which he loved and served remains.

And no observant person at home or abroad can fail to understand that America in the face of tragedy has risen once more to the quality of greatness which best marks it in its darkest hours. Bickering and bitterness fall like old chabby scales off the strong body of America when the tragic news sped from Dallas. The country was united. Men spoke more clearly even from choked throats. The vision was clearer even through misted eyes.

The President is dead. President Johnson now has the united, patriotic, devoted support of the American people. Of course, the emotion of the moment which sustains the new President in his shocking, swift assumption of power will be greatest in his first sad days in office. But even now in emotion Americans recognize that in Lyndon Baines Johnson they have a new Chief Executive qualified, as few ascending Presidents have ever been, for the great responsibilities he confronts.

His whole career, indeed, has been a steady advance in government service to knowledge and skill in all its operations. Furthermore, as Vice President he has been no mere presiding officer of the Senate. As executive, activator and great ambassador to the world, he served his dead chief in such a way as to win his whole confidence and to justify the confidence of Americans. Still young at 35, skilled in leadership, articulate in faith, he comes to the Presidency with the qualities America requires at this critical time in its history. It is not strange that recently John Kennedy once more declared that he was the man he wished as his possible successor in the leadership of the nation.

The President is dead. The President rules. America is secure.

Echoes of a Weekend Sound the Requiem

HAUNTING ECHOES linger from a weekend like no other the nation or the world has seen. It was a weekend eerily at times with the unknown, unsettling with the strangeness of what was known, and yet resonant with reassurance because of the strength of an American shot down and Americans we saw, heard or heard about.

Sen. Mansfield intoning these words in admiration of a dead president's widow: "She took a ring from her finger and put it in his name. . . . And so. . . ." And so we all watched Jacqueline Kennedy, many of us seeing for the first time a nobility and strength of person which we had not seen before back there in the shadow of the one whose strength we knew. We watched her with her two beautiful children at the flag-draped bier of their father, where she knelt and kissed the casket; then we saw her walk with firm step and grief-glazed eyes to her next place of duty.

David Brinkley, in a tired moment, quietly slicing into the senselessness of this unfathomable thing: "And so it seems that all this horror and all this grief was caused by a punk with a $12 mail-order rifle."

Leverett Saltonstall, aristocratic New Englander of the Senate, talking calmly with other senators about the new president, suddenly seeming embarrassed and drawing himself up sharply in self-rebuke: "I shouldn't be saying Lyndon. I should say 'the President' now. . . ."

(How many others savored the strangeness of saying "President Johnson" and "the assassination of President Kennedy"? President Johnson was a man who lived in the White House a hundred years ago; assassinations are events in history books; cults and corteges and catafalques are things we hear of on documentaries about FDR.)

Bob Snodgrass, Georgia Republicanism's national committeeman, his face etched with weariness and care, his voice almost breaking as he said: "All this hatred. . . all this hatred."

(Here, you thought, was more than careful words put together by some of the careful Democrats; here was feeling, from a man not of the President's party and view. Hate, you thought, has been seen in both parties in Georgia; we have been bipartisan in hate, and sometimes bipartisan in spreading the tenets of anarchy.)

The people of England singing massively, to the strains of an organ in Westminster Abbey, a song we did not know they knew, about a "terrible swift sword": ". . . He is tramping out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored. . . ." And a young English dramatist stretching our flag across oceans when he said, after praising Lyndon Johnson: "We, the citizens of an alliance he now leads. . . ." Then, Willy Brandt, symbol of Free Berlin, soberly describing the loyalty which a city of Germans felt toward an Irish-American president, speaking near the Wall that enshrines grapes of wrath.

Those were some of the echoes of this weekend.

In all the uncertainties, we still heard voices that conveyed something of the greatness of a country. Glimpses of the stubborn fiber of individuals, and unexpected glimpses of profound understanding on the part of people all around the world, revealed it best.

This, rather than all the madness seen in Dallas, was the real requiem for John F. Kennedy.

A Day Of Profound Tragedy In The Nation's History

The death of no human being in modern history has so shocked, numbed, grieved and outraged the people of the United States and of the Free World as that of the 35th U. S. President yesterday afternoon.

This newspaper extends its heartfelt sympathy to the widow and family of John Fitzgerald Kennedy in their terrible personal loss.

It deplores the brutal and cowardly crime which in an instant robbed our country of one of the most dynamic, interesting, controversial and dedicated young political personalities and leaders in the life of this Republic. That he should have died at the zenith of an amazing career of public service and at the height of his intellectual and physical powers only compounds the sadness and regret which must now grip us all. And we can only wonder blindly why an inexorable fate should choose a senseless, maniacal act to snuff out the life of the Free World's most influential leader.

The risk of assassination is one which all public figures must accept. The more powerful and controversial they be, the greater the risk, as world history will attest. No chief of state is immune to the barbarism of a madman, even though every reasonable precaution be taken, as it was yesterday, to insure the safety of the President.

Now the dastardly deed has been done and there is naught to do but endure the awesome experience and fervently hope that the deranged individual or individuals responsible will be apprehended and administered justice.

In the emotional upheaval which followed yesterday's tragedy, there were some citizens interviewed over radio who heaped "shame" upon a city, state, region and nation for those rifle shots. Dallas, Texas, is no more to blame for the death of John F. Kennedy than Lynchburg, New York, Moscow or Peking. Anti-Kennedy sentiment was strong there, to be sure, but strong political convictions can hardly be equated with acts of madness. We may be certain that most citizens of that great city today bear an even greater burden of woe than the rest of us because

A dangerous situation that could cause loss of life has developed in the county because of teenagers shooting high powered rifles indiscriminately, game warden Pat Toomey said yesterday noting that a man had been grazed by a stray bullet and a calf killed near Lakeshore.

He asked that parents not allow their boys to use rifles for hunting or any other purpose because of the crowded condition of the county.

Toomey said that NASA officials had met with him and told of field engineers working in the woods being narrowly missed by bullets and threatened to close the buffer zone for hunting unless something was done. Deer hunters should use shotguns loaded with buckshot.

Deer season opened Nov. 20 and will close Dec. 1. It will open again Dec. 26 through Jan. 11. Duck season opens Dec. 2 through Jan. 5 with a daily bag limit of four ducks and eight coots. Toomey said he has seen plenty of ducks this year.

OUR PRESIDENT STRUCK DOWN

Albany Herald, Albany Georgia

He was a gangling kid, who was never as strong nor as fleet as the other boys, but his determination to measure up shone as brightly as the amazing shock of hair which sprouted from his head like the sedge-grass on the uneven dunes of his beloved Cape Cod. He was a rich man's son — "lace-curtain Irish" was the common Boston term — and it would arouse his temper when some indicated his wealth as an open sesame to achievement.

It was almost a fixation with him that he be recognized as a "regular guy" even though an inward timidity brought the sweat to his brow and the clench to his fingers whether as a lad he took a girl to the school dance or as a man he faced national audiences for major speeches. It was not the cut of his jib to be a public figure, but, as in so many other things, he shaped his life to the fierce loyalty of family, demands which pushed into the background a natural desire to study and teach and inspired anxious response to the implacable will of a zealous father as well as the glowing memory of a war-hero brother whose untimely death ended an assured political presence.

His happier moments were with himself when, reading his cherished books, his imagination could hear the clank of Caesar's legions or the sonorous tones of a Webster replying to Hayne or see again the sweep of Pickett's charge and the mute sadness that came to Lee. It was his warm feeling for human courage, dignifying all history, that gave sound quality to his literary efforts and sustained him as a man of action when his PT-boat was rammed in the Pacific in World War II where he managed a rescue of several of his mates. Behind his "impish grin and the attitude of nonchalance that he wore like a Brooks Brothers suit, there was an appraising mind which at once enjoyed the elegance of the scholar's phrase and the energetic deeds of reality.

When he came to politics after the war, he brought with him an air of magic, which was an effective compound of personal charm, astute organization, sizable money resources and an uncanny ability to tie to himself indefatigable supporters. And perhaps, too, he carried that halo of good luck which so often distinguishes the winners from the defeated in American public life. He should not have been able to defeat Henry Cabot Lodge for the Massachusetts Senatorship — but he did. He should not have been able to capture the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1960 — but he did. He should not have been able to defeat Richard Nixon for the White House — but he did. Indeed, his rapid rise in national politics quite obscured the fact that his liabilities usually over-matched his assets.

Some said his success was a matter of money; others said television made him as surely as radio made Franklin Roosevelt. Still others pointed to the sudden breaks that would appear in the dark political clouds as if the hand of fate were resting on his shoulder. Truly, all of these things were factors in a meteoric career, but none should be able to discount the man's absorption in duty as he saw it, his intuitive grasp of public thought and his severe battles with self discipline. He invested the full capacity of mind and heart in anything that deeply moved and interested him. He was not a person given to qualified commitments to his country, his enterprise or his friends.

Such a man, of course, would inevitably raise storms of criticism and make enemies. He was not infallible. He made grievous mistakes. He could be petulant, vain, arbitrary and politically vindictive. Yet in all the hours of strain and stress that attended his three years in the White House he somehow conveyed the sense that he was fighting for a better future for ordinary human beings, that beyond the turmoil he glimpsed the outlines of a world in which peace, freedom and security might finally prevail. He tried mightily to articulate men's highest hopes. He tried to give them courage in their darkest moments, even as he sought assurance from above as he manned the lonely-liest of all American command posts.

In due course, history will assign him his place, and as he is catalogued the detractors will be as busy as they are numerous. Yet the assassin's bullet, projected with twisted, unthinking hatred, will have missed its mark. It may have even engendered an ennoblement. For all over the world the weak and the impoverished, the frightened and the questing, will recall the flame of his spirit and the doggedness of his dedication. There is, to put it simply, no higher tribute

Dallas chanced to be the setting for this monstrous act.

History will have its own detached and long-range view of the late President in the years to come. But this much can now be said: He was a man who embraced lofty ideals, who was wedded to the idea of a powerful, centralized government as the best means of advancing the American state and the American dream. There are those like ourselves who believe that most of the New Frontier policies which Mr. Kennedy fought so hard for will, in the long run, be discredited. But none of us, in this hour of death and sorrow, denigrate such personal qualities as a brilliant intellect, charm, political acumen, fortitude and leadership—all of which he possessed in abundance.

The Detroit News

WHO IS BLAMELESS?

Hate Kills A President

"Truth never yet fell dead in the streets; it has such affinity with the soul of man, the seed however broadcast will catch somewhere and produce its hundredfold."

Thus spoke the Rev. Mr. Theodore Parker, 121 years ago, in the face of the gathering storm of civil war, of truth and of human nature.

It may be of some comfort to us to hold to this simple and sturdy faith. Indeed, if we cannot hold it, even now on this most deadening and heart-sick and empty of days, then our hopes and dreams of freedom for men, for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for ourselves and our children, for all mankind, are hollow; are withered leaves in an aimless wind.

But can we doubt that what Parker said of truth must likewise be said of hate?

Hate, too, has such affinity with the soul of man that the seed will catch somewhere. And in that somewhere it will feed, and grow, and in some men consume their souls. And when it does, such a man is ready to kill a President — or any other human being, as precious in the eyes of God.

He is made ready by hate to destroy, for the sheer joy of destruction. He will tell himself — he will probably believe, himself — that he is killing — destroying — for a most noble cause.

Could he but know his own heart he would know that by the time hate has brought him to such a state as this, his means to what he may think is a noble end has in fact become an ignoble end in itself.

And thus because hate, like truth, never yet fell dead in the streets but has such affinity with the soul of man, is a nation thrown into sorrow and mourning for a young and vigorous President — controversial, true, as any meaningful President is likely to be, but surely devoted as much, with as full a heart, as any man in this nation to its preservation and betterment; as much as any man in this world to peace and the fullest achievable life for all of its people.

There are people who hate with a vengeance, and will not agree, and will not mourn. The rest of us call them "a lunatic fringe," or some like name, and comfort ourselves that we, thank God, are not like "them."

But are we not in fact like "them" under the skin, in some degree great or small? Is there not one of us in whom the seed has not caught somewhere? Does not each one of us try a bit or a lot with hate, secure in the illusion that it is safe?

It is not safe. It is never safe. It has such affinity for the soul of man that the seed, however broadcast, will catch somewhere.

Hate moved the man who killed the patient Lincoln, the inoffensive Archduke Ferdinand, the saintly Ghandi. Hate moved the man who tried to kill Franklin D. Roosevelt, the men who tried to kill Harry S. Truman. Hate moved the man who killed John F. Kennedy.

These and so many like them share no common ties of race, language, ideology. All they share is hate, which stripped of all the window-dressing its possessors hang on it, is the same in English as in Chinese, in German as in Swahili. It is the same when it festers under a white skin as under a black skin or a yellow skin. It is the same when it purports to promote any ideology under the sun.

The Secret Service, whose duty it is to protect the President, had worried much about Dallas, and not without cause. Stronghold of ultra-right-wing fervor, it seemed a most apt and likely place for overweening hate to strike. A political climate which could produce patriots hate-brave enough to spit at a Lady Bird Johnson or an Adlai Stevenson was not beyond producing one hate-crazed enough to kill Mr. Kennedy.

Yet, irony of ironies, the man first arrested by police springs not from the Lunatic Right, which could have produced him, but from the Lunatic Left. Irony, but hardly surprising.

Hate has no political coloration. It can and does find a home anywhere that men allow passion, which is an inescapable and necessary part of their being, to sour and grow until it wholly possesses them.

Like love and like truth, hate is a universal currency. Anyone can spend it. Anyone can acquire it. Anyone can accumulate so much of it that it devours his soul.

And anyone — each of us — is capable of planting its seed in the soul of another. Let not any man say, "This man has taught to do with me," who cannot also truthfully say, "I have never borne hate toward any man."

Let not the political Right look down its pious nose at the political Left. Let not the Left sanctimoniously ask, "Lord, is it I?" as it glances knowingly rightward. We are all sinners.

Yet it is given to us to hope that we are something else as well. It is given to us to hope that The Rev. Mr. Parker was right about truth and the soul of man. It is given to us to pray that the death of President Kennedy will open our eyes, each of us, and show us the way we are going and the way we should go.

THE MILWAUKEE JOURNAL

Milwaukee, Wisconsin

John Fitzgerald Kennedy

The tragedy of the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy will be with us and the world for a long time. This young, vibrant, eloquent man was leader not only of the United States but of the free world. The measure of the loss is still smothered by the impact of shock and the horror of the crime that took him.

President Kennedy was the vanguard of youth that was ready to take over the leadership of nations from the tired and aging men whose roots go well back into the beginning of the century. In a real sense his was the voice of the future and of a new and better world. That voice, always articulate, often moving, was listened to by men everywhere.

For the United States the tragedy is personal and bitter. Not all men liked the policies of the president. But few did not admire him as a human being. He and his family had brought a warmth and a vibrancy to the White House which had lacked them for too long.

But there are many who also admired him for his policies and his ideas and ideals. They looked to him as a hope in an uneasy world. There were many who loved him. The heart of every American will go out to his family, which loved him most.

There is so little that can be said when a great man has gone. The void always seems so tremendous, the future so dark, the fears so sharp. The country will go on, of course, for it is a great country of great strengths. The sun that goes down will give rise to new suns.

History has yet to deal with John Fitzgerald Kennedy. One can guess that it will deal well. He was a new type of political leader emerging from the old-freeer of emotion than most, a pragmatist. He saw the world clearly, and while he aimed high he had the realism to accept the limitations of men and events.

The problems that men created, Mr. Kennedy said, can be solved by men. His no longer is the responsibility. It passes to other shoulders, and it is heavy. As the nation mourns it will do well to take to heart the words that President Kennedy spoke in New York city only a few days ago:

"My fellow Americans, let us be guided by our interests, not our indignation. Let us heed the words of Paul the Apostle to the Galatians:

"Let us not be weary in well doing," he wrote, "for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

"And let the word go forth—to all who are concerned about the future of the human family—that we will not be weary in well doing and we will faint not; and we shall, in due season, reap a harvest of peace and security for all members of the family of man."

Due to the fact that President Kennedy's untimely death is the only subject under discussion by anybody anywhere, this week's column will probably be somewhat more brief than usual. The people of Mississippi who were in our opinion justifiably unhappy with the handling of the Oxford mess, are even more unhappy over the assassination of the President of our United States.

A roughly 96 period of nationwide mourning emphasized by the absence of any regular television programs may in the long run have a beneficial effect, although we shudder at the thought of some husbands and wives searching for enough conversation to pass away this much time. At least the results should prove interesting! Television may be producing a generation of morons according to some educators, but it's certainly a boon to weary mothers and it's kind of difficult to wage an interesting verbal battle with one's husband when he's engrossed in Bonanza!

Bea goes to Washington

Bea Georgi is the only local resident of whom we've heard attending the President's funeral. . . she left via air early Sunday morning and returned Wednesday. Bea is and has been an ardent Kennedy fan since long before his nomination and deeply mourns his passing.

Bea, Margaret and Eugene Rhehart, owners of the Holiday Sands motel attended a Coast Motel Owners Assn. meeting at the Emerald Beach in Biloxi last Wednesday night.

We hear that Harold Carver has purchased the largest electric automobile model he could find. . . last year when his son, little Jerome was 18 months old Santa brought him an electric train. . . maybe this explains Harold's recent strenuous diet!

Our ailing friends

We'll send get well greetings to Warren (Mac) McDaniel who is a patient in Biloxi Veterans' hospital and to Rose Garza, homebound with mumps of all things! Bob Geiger is also feeling somewhat under par. We want to explain that Joe Tait is home again on 30 day leave from Veterans Hospital in the Crescent City because he gave up his much needed bed to a patient suffering from cancer and will continue to take his medication at his parents' Toulme Street home.

Miss Rita Cue recently returned home from her latest trip in which she covered nine states accompanied by Mrs. Dorothy Varin. During the trek they visited friends in New York City and Philadelphia.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Irene Graff and Cliff Vogt on the death of their father, Charlie Vogt, who passed away last Wednesday night. Among those attending the wake in New Orleans Thursday night were Belle Peterson, Elaine Davis, Grace, Lionel, Ray and Wilfred Bordages.

Sympathy also is sent to Pete Noto and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Noto, jr. who lost their first child, a little girl christened Karen Kay, two weeks after her birth.

Rita Blaize appears to be quite happy in her new job. . . she's working for Arnold Kohn at Magnolia Title Company.

The Henry Capdepons and daughter Gladys (Mrs. Lamar) Bassett of Pascagoula left for San Antonio, Texas, this week. . . they'll visit another daughter, Elsie Mae Higgins and family there.

Among new residents are Mr. and Mrs. James De Rose who are making their home on Necaise Avenue in Waveland.

Thelma and Paul Henley are buzzing around in a lovely new automobile.

The Lakeshore Garden of the Month plaque is currently displayed in the yard of Gladys (Mrs. Harry) Baxter.

Jackie Buffin arrived home Monday after being called to Toronto, Canada last Sunday by the sudden death of her aunt. On the plane trip home she stopped in Chicago for a brief visit with her father.

Shirley and Ed Hawkins and children Carol and Donnie spent their first weekend in their Clermont Harbor home in quite a while.

An island called Majorca

We're feeling quite cosmopolitan at the moment having vicariously enjoyed a ten-day trip to the Spanish Island of Majorca through the eyes of George Stevenson. . . he had us absolutely ravenous describing unpeppered course dinners lasting from 9 p.m. until midnight or after. . . during the tour he visited 13th Century cathedrals, more modern leather factories, olive and almond groves, admired windmills, breathtaking views from high atop mountains and the Spanish beauties, although he says the American girls are just as beautiful if not more so, and as sort of an anti-climax he attended a bullfight which he enjoyed probably because it would have been S.P.C.A. approved. . . the bulls were not killed, but lived to fight another day. We might add that Mr. Stevenson, who insists he's always feared heights, took the two way jet trip without a tremor!

Sorry we had everyone in town straining their eyes in vain for a glimpse of Bea Georgi in Washington. . . Bea and her nephew, Earl Redif, a student at Loyola, dutifully boarded a D.C. bound plane as a little after 1 a.m. Monday expecting to land in the Capitol city at 6:08. . . they sat, and sat and sat. . . when engine trouble had not been corrected by 4 a.m. they gave up and returned home to view proceedings with the rest of us on the television screen!

A very warm welcome is extended to Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Miller, Mrs. Miller's mother and their two children who have just moved into a home at 101 Sycamore St. The Millers have been here almost a month staying at Holiday Sands Motel before choosing a home. Mr. Miller is with North American Aviation and they hail from Los Angeles, Calif.

Eating Thanksgiving dinner with his son and daughter-in-law and family, the Eugene Rheharts, for the first time in three years, will be Mr. Rhehart, sr., who is advertising agent for a travelling roadshow covering a number of states - so many, in fact, that up until three years ago, he hadn't enjoyed a holiday meal with his family in ten years.

Gripe dept.

People who absolutely refuse to dim their automobile lights. . . almost as bad are those who wait until they are 20 or 30 feet away. . . by that time on approaching driver is too blind to know or care whether they dim or not. This lack of common politeness can have far reaching effects as it's virtually impossible to see a pedestrian or cyclist in your path when glaring lights render you oblivious for possibly fatal seconds!

Canine clues

Rebel, Louis Loder's Labrador retriever, is safely and securely reposing in his own pen cage more and apparently he discovered three squares are more to be valued than freedom. . . he shows little inclination to dig his way out again.

Vacation Lane resident now living in Jackson, dropped in on Waveland friends Monday. He promises to bring the new Mrs. Hewitt, whom we understand is most attractive, with him on his next visit.

The birthday group feted Belle Penrose and Mabel Carter jointly last week.

Hospitalized

Col. Marcel Gills is a patient in Baptist Hospital in New Orleans. . . we'll send him get well in a hurry wishes. . . on the more cheerful side of the ledger is the news that Charlie Mollere is at home once more having been released from Veterans in Biloxi last Wednesday. . . he'll have to rely on his wheel chair for a few months but we're betting on him to be walking around again come spring. Ed Phillips reports that wife Bevy, although still confined to her home, is feeling fine and well on the road to complete recovery from a broken hip.

Mrs. Peter Monroe entertained at cocktails last week prior to leaving for Virginia Beach, Va. where she is spending the holidays with her daughter Mrs. James Locastour, Colonel Locastour and children.

realize it happened" was the reaction of 99 per cent of those questioned. . . one or two who had gotten over the initial shock did wonder who the Kennedy haters would find to hate now? but on the whole the few people of our area who could be found away from tv sets to comment apparently shared the grief of the nation, and almost of the world and were too shocked to be original in their comments.

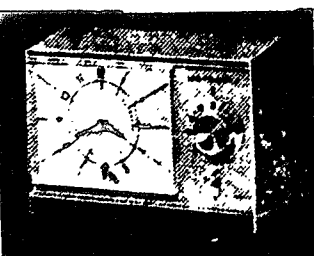

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS ALONG THE WAY: The small grey striped and white spotted cat whose apparently charmed life leads it safely back and forth across Main Street at least a dozen times daily; a single star, an early intruder on the slowly fading splendor of the copper toned sunset, a surprising number of flags, here, there and almost everywhere sadly waving at half-mast and the almost complete silence of the stunned populace refusing here, there and almost everywhere sadly waving at half-mast and the almost complete silence of the stunned populace refusing to believe what has taken place.

ELECTRIC POWER ASSOCIATIONS AND DRUMSTICKS

Whether your menu calls for turkey or chicken this year, you'll know that it cost less than in years gone by. Each year since World War II, the price of chicken has dropped more than a cent a pound. And any lover of roast hen or fried drumsticks will tell you it's better eating than ever.

What's responsible to this more-for-the money miracle in Mississippi? One reason is the fast-growing poultry industry which has developed in areas served by Electric Power Associations. Electricity makes possible modern production and processing efficiencies which help make chicken a Sunday treat most Mississippians can afford every day.

Today, push-button electricity lets one or two farm workers tend 20,000 chickens, feed 500 cattle or milk 50 cows.

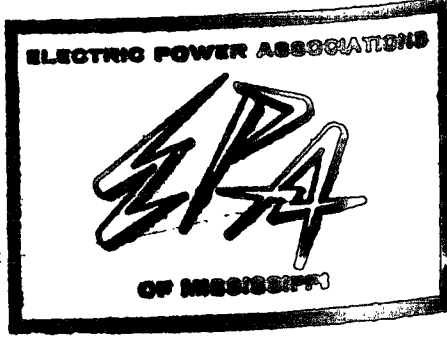

This lowers food production costs, but every six years the demand for rural electricity is doubled.

Rural Electrification Administration loans which are being repaid in full with interest, enable Electric Power Associations to build heavier lines to supply this growing need for power.

Best of all these loans benefit you whether you live in town or on the farm. Electricity helps farmers produce an abundance of high quality food for everyone. It hikes rural living standards, and improves rural schools and churches. It creates new jobs and opportunities from the production of raw materials, manufacturing, wholesale and retail channels through a multi-billion dollar annual market for electrical products.

So as you pause to give thanks for your many blessings on Thanksgiving Day this year, also give thanks for the Mississippians who pioneered in establishing the Electric Power Association in your area so you, too, might realize the benefits of the economic and social progress which has come as a result of rural electrification.

Enjoy and give thanks for your drumstick—

and cooked—electrically

Hawks breeze by PRC

North Central had little trouble with Pearl River Central Tuesday night winning three out of four games in the hawk gym. Pearl River Central was no match for the Hawks winding up on the short end of a 65-44 score. North Central took a 6-point lead in the first period, added more in the second, really whipped them in the third with a 16-point advantage and added 3 in the fourth. Berlin Lader was high with 19 points, Wendell Lader got 14 and Eddie Peterson 8. For Pearl River, Larry Bounds got 12. H.N.C. 14 16 20 15 - 65 P.R.C. 8 10 4 12 - 34

The Hawkettes were not so fortunate and could not get going, losing 51-24. Starting offensively was Valerie Malley who hit for 24 and defensively it was Wanda Pippin.

Junior High boys won 33-19 as did the girls 30-26. Tonight the Hawks entertain Ocean Springs in a toughie but they are looking forward to Tuesday's battle with Bay High in the North Central gym.

Peterson paces Hawk cagers in opening win
 Eddie Peterson shifted his touchdown passing talents to marksmanship with the hoop as he scored 16 points to lead Hancock North Central cagers to a 60-50 triumph over Stone High of Wiggins on their opening game on Nov. 19 in the hawk gym. It was Stone's first loss in three starts.

Berlin Lader tallied 13 points and Wendell Lader 11 to lead the Hawks. The Charles Kennedy contributed 24 for the Tomcats and Robert Taylor added 10.

North Central scored 16 points in the first quarter, 19 in the second, 9 in the third and 16 in the fourth while Stone got 11, 18, 16 and 11.

The Hawkettes fared not as well, losing 46-27 to the Stone girls. Valerie Malley was the only North Central girl to score in the double figures with 15. Theresa Brown of Stone paced her squad with 21 and Judy Soucier added 12.

MESTAYER (10), STRONG (25) BATTLE REBELS

Tigers edge Rebels but JV squad beat

Bay High's basketballers squeaked out a hard-fought, one-point victory over tough Harrison Central 52-51 Friday night in the Tiger gym while the juniors lost 35-29. It was both squads' opening game of the season.

Both teams were equally matched and neither seldom got more than two points ahead. At half time Harrison Central was ahead 30-28.

High scorer for the Tigers were Larry Johnson with 17 points and Ross Maurigi with 15. Freshman Charles Necaise, rated by coach Wilmer Seymour as one of the hottest prospects around and who had played three quarters in the junior game, got into the senior contest in the final quarter after Leroy Luke and Maurigi had fouled out and scored 8 points. Sophomores Dick Mestayer and Mike Strong also saw action in the final quarter, their first varsity game. Strong scored 4 points and Mestayer 1.

This year Seymour is fielding a young team but the boys showed plenty of determination and competitive spark and are expected to go far. Starting line-up has two sophomores, two juniors and one senior.

High scorer for the night was Paul Ladner of Harrison Central with 27.

Junior high scorers for the Tigers were Charles Necaise with 11, Mike Necaise 9 and C. J. Wyman, 8. Mike Necaise is Charles' uncle and both are originally from around Kiln, home of the famous North Central state championship team, all named Necaise.

A tall forward named Jerry Evans was the difference as the Tigerettes were defeated by Harrison Central's girls 53-36. The Rebellets got off to a 9-point lead in the first period and added 2 more in the second. The Tigerettes got 12 to Harrison's 8 in the third but the Evans girl led her sextet to a solid 18-8 lead in the final stanza.

Melva Luke was high for Bay High with 24 points. Starting at defense were guards Mary Middleton, Maria Peterson, Geraldine Kidd and Ellen McDonald who was shifted from forward.

Artigues paces Gold Jays, lose to VanCleave

Scoring a whopping 40 points out of 48, Little Mary Jo Artigues appeared headed for fame in the Coast area after St. Joseph Academy lost to VanCleave 48-50 last Thursday there.

Although barely over fivefeet she got 14 field goals and 12 fouls. Against Bay High she hit the basket 20 times out of 23 free tries and scored 38 out of 49 points.

VanCleave won the game in the first and last quarters, taking a first period lead of 14-9 and scoring 17 to St. Joseph's 16 in the fourth. The Jays were handicapped by the loss of Toni Ladner who fouled out.

It was nip and tuck all the way, VanCleave getting a 5-point lead but the Gold Jays whittled it down to three in the second, getting 10 to VanCleave's 8, and down to 1 in the third, taking the quarter 13-11.

"My telephone is indispensable in my business and Mississippi Manufacturers Association work," says Ernest Bowton of Philadelphia and current president of the M.M.A. "There is no other communication that is so versatile... long distance, local and interplant... all completed in a few minutes. The list of calls during just one week showed a saving nearly 16 hours in time and 651 miles of driving."

Your telephone probably gave you as much valuable help this week. There may even more ways you can use your telephone to save time and money in your business, personal or civic activities. Telephones do so much... yet cost so little.

Fleas beat Flies in 47th renewal

Scoring in every quarter, a mighty Flea football squad powered its way to victory over an equally rugged Fly team 26-9 Sunday afternoon in the 47th annual Flea-Fly classic in Stanislaus Stadium before a near-capacity crowd of excited parents. It was a good game.

The Flies drew first blood in the first period when speedy Jimmie Poolson, 60-pound quarterback, hit pay dirt for TD and again for the extra point on roll-outs. The Fleas got rolling shortly after when Dale Ocasano, big 60-pound quarterback duplicated the feat scoring on a tricky roll-out but the extra point try failed and at the end of the first period it was 7-6, Flies.

The Fleas opened the second frame with a determined march and would not be headed, 70-pound quarterback Phillip Gayaut scoring on a sneak and 75-pound James Brown, halfback, added the extra point on a power play. The Flies added two points on a safety when Darold Carlot tackled a Flea in the end zone. The quarter ended 13-9, Fleas.

A 59-pound Irish halfback, Tim Ryan, opened the third and final frame with a touchdown on a double reverse and fullback Gary Griffin added the extra point on an off-tackle play.

Davey Kidd, 61-pound Flea quarterback, added insult to injury scoring the final TD on a keeper.

Other outstanding players included Rudy Tillman, James Bermond, George Koapp, Stephen Durr and David Wiggins.

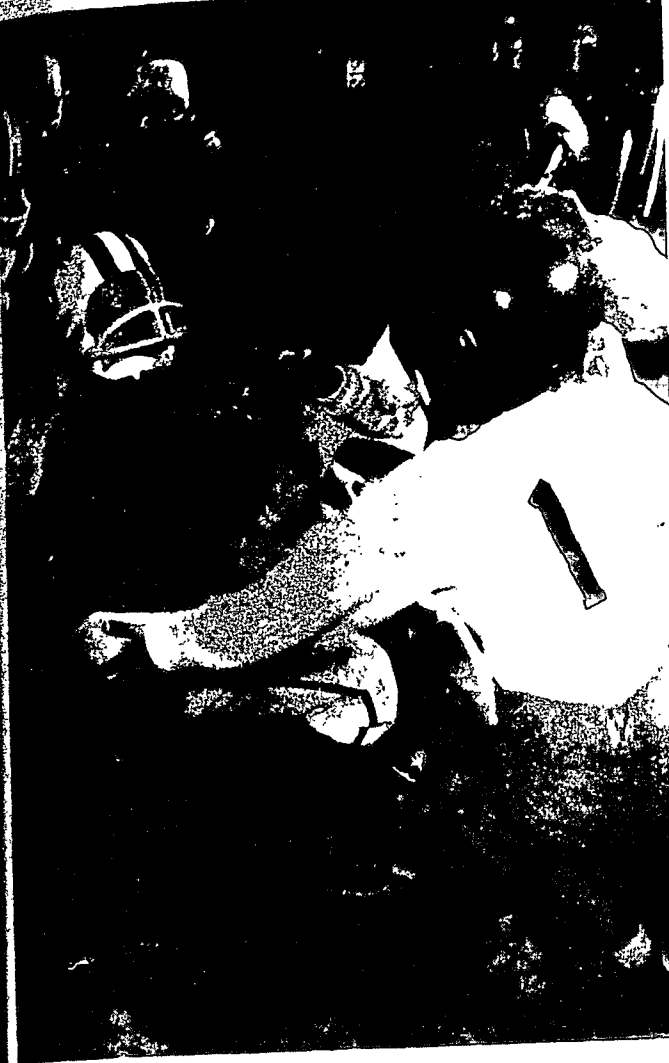

Scorekeeper was Steve Roberts, Stanislaus sports reporter.

Humble asks permit to dredge Mulatto

Humble Oil and Refining Co. has applied to the Corps of Engineers for a permit to dredge from the northeast bank of Mulatto Bayou a canal 128 feet wide, 8.5 feet deep and 9.33 feet long about 4.5 miles southwest of Pearlinton. Spoil will be deposited along each side of the canal.

Protests to the proposal should be filed in writing with the Engineers at Mobile no later than Dec. 3.

It is understood the dredging is to enable Humble to move in an oil rig for a wildcat drilling on the Gus Baldwin property.

2nd annual Aluminum bowl St. Bernard beats Rocks in bowl play

The Saints were marching Friday night in Chalmette High Stadium at Chalmette, La., but St. Bernard's Eagles marched a little harder than St. Stanislaus's Rockchaws, winning 34-7 in the second annual Aluminum Bowl sponsored by the St. Bernard Parish Jaycees.

It started out as a close contest, neither team scoring in the first quarter but in the second the Eagles started rolling when Felix Nunez passed 23 yards to Dave Billiot for a TD and Billiot ran for the extra point.

Nunez was named outstanding player and Billiot lineman for the game. They received aluminum trophies and the winning team a large aluminum trophy. Nunez is rated one of the best passers in high school competition in this area.

On the first play after the opening kickoff Rockchaw quarterback Curtis Matherne electrified the crowd with a 70 yard touchdown pass to halfback James O'Neal. Center Paul Waver booted the extra point to even the score with 9:40 remaining in the first half but the Eagles started going and would not be stopped. Nunez hit Henry L'Hoste in the end zone and then ran the extra point and after a Rockchaw fumble scored himself from the four on a keeper. In the third period Billiot scored from the 11 and Nunez ran the extra point, then in the fourth Nunez hit Anthony Nicolsia with a 7-yard TD pass.

Score by quarters:
Stanislaus 0 7 0 0 - 7
St. Bernard 0 21 7 6 - 34

Tigers warm up for Hawks with 63-40 win

Bay High's basketballers had little trouble taking St. Martin for a ride 63-40 Tuesday night there but the Tigerettes dropped the opener 56-34.

The Tigers are gearing for the first crucial battle of the season next Tuesday when they travel to Hancock North Central to tackle the state-famous Hawks and coach Wilmer Seymour hopes to burst their balloon this year. North Central's coach Roland Ladner's only comment was let "em come, we're ready".

Play was fairly even in the first quarter but the Tigers started pulling away in the second and led by 20 points at the half when Tiger reserves took over and finished the game.

Larry Harrison was high scorer with 16, Ross Mourig next with 12 and Leroy Luke 10. There were no foul-outs. Sherlyn Cochran was high for the girls with 17 and Melva Luke added 12. Nancy Goff paced St. Martin, also with 17, while Elaine Powell got 16 and Kay Mayer 14. By quarters St. Martin tallied 15, 9, 20 and 12 points to Bay High's 10, 9, 9 and 6.

Glover heads local chapter of Red Cross

J. Cyril Glover, first vice president of the Hancock County chapter, American Red Cross, was elevated to the presidency at an organizational meeting Wednesday morning. He succeeds the late K. W. Pepperdene.

Future of the chapter was considered at length, concern being directed particularly at the need to keep it in operation to retain the present county blood bank operation.

Mrs. Pepperdene, secretary, reported about $1,000 remaining for the 1963 fund drive to tide over operations until the 1964 fund campaign which opens March 1. Another meeting is set for Jan. 8 to appoint a fund drive chairman.

Attending Wednesday's session were W. R. Gordon, Tom Logue, T. J. Garner, Mrs. Winthrop Baker, Mrs. Pepperdene and Glover.

Wilcox heads electric unit

Delmer Wilcox was elected president of the newly formed Electrical Contractors of Hancock County at their organizational meeting last Wednesday night at Broadview restaurant.

Leroy Luke was chosen vice president with Lloyd Shubert, secretary, and Edward (Buster) Heitzmann, treasurer. Directors will be Edward Soffray, Norman Tartavouille, Ogden Kergosien, and Pat Murphy.

The association's purpose is to set up an electrical code for protection of county residents and to preserve the electrical trade.

Industry study...

They noted that in many counties large sums of money must be spent to provide fresh water whereas in Hancock this is a natural resource.

H. H. Shemich, chairman of the port commission, said the company announced it is assigning additional men to this job so the necessary report can be completed well in advance of the July 1 deadline for submission of findings to the state budget commission and apply for reimbursement of two mills of the ad valorem levy.

The economist and civil engineer working on the Hancock project—Messrs. Cleson and Rutledge—also were present. Plans also were made for Arlie Strain, vice chairman of the commission, and possibly one other member to accompany Baker representatives to Huntsville, Ala., Dec. 16 to confer with NASA officials about ways of attracting industry here related to Mississippi Test Operations and how the commission can assist.
